Ignite Your Results

4 Simple Strategies That Work

1

Linner: The Power of an Early Final Meal

Linner isn't lunch and it isn't dinner—it's the meal in between. Eating your final meal between 3:00 and 5:30 PM supports your body's natural rhythm and makes intermittent fasting easier. Instead of skipping breakfast, try ending your day early. This simple shift can have a major impact on your metabolism and weight loss.

2

40 Squats After Every Meal

Do 40 bodyweight squats within 30 minutes of eating. Why? This quick movement helps burn the blood sugar spike from your meal before it gets stored as fat. It's simple, fast, and incredibly effective.

3

A 24-Hour Fast (Breakfast to Breakfast)

Once a week, try eating a high-protein breakfast (eggs and meat cooked in butter), then fasting until breakfast the next day. This kind of structured 24-hour fast gives your digestive system a break and your metabolism a reset—without starving yourself.

4

Prioritize Protein & Low-Glycemic Veggies

Focus on protein-rich meals paired with low-glycemic vegetables. These foods help stabilize blood sugar and keep you feeling full longer. Avoid processed carbs, sugary snacks, and high-sugar fruits, they can sabotage your progress.
